In Memory of
John Barton
1943-1988

MY FRIEND JOHN BARTON

Having never written a memorial for a friend before, I was a little unsure of what to say about John Barton. After thinking about the matter I realized that most of you reading this would already know the business side of John, and would be curious as to what John was like outside of the numismatic trade. I can only give you my perspective of the man, but I think it is a story worth telling, since he entered my life at an early age and we did a lot together.

I first met John Barton on December 2, 1973. He was 30 years old, married one year, and living in an apartment on Lincoln Avenue in Chicago. I was a fifteen year old kid who just discovered ancient coins as a passion. My mother saw an advertisement in Chicago Magazine, placed by John, offering EF condition Roman Denarii of the early empire for $25.00 as a Christmas gift idea. I gave the man a call and that is how our friendship began.

I had just read a book on collecting ancient coins published in the early 1960's which gave current prices. I remember John patiently explaining that Athenian Tetradrachms were no longer $15-$20 in VF condition and large Egyptian bronzes were not $5.00 anymore. He was very concerned that I not give up the idea of collecting due to the higher prices than I was expecting, and gave me good deals whenever he could.

For the first couple of years our friendship was mainly based on a mutual love of ancient history and the associated coins of those times. After I got my drivers license, I started making frequent trips from my home in the suburbs into the city to visit John and his wife Mary Ann. This allowed us to get to know each other much better and our friendship evolved beyond coins. John became more of a mentor and I his student. John was very supportive when he found out that my parents were getting a divorce and tried to offer guidance that a father or older brother might provide. He always loved giving me advice on the subject of women - a topic dear to his heart!

With college approaching, finances were of great concern. Under John's guidance I ventured into the world of coin dealing, and put out two coin catalogs. This venture helped a lot and I have fond memories of John and I working late at his apartment trying to put the first list together.

The year before this, 1975 I think, John started OWL LTD which was devoted to ancient and medieval coins plus some antiquities. The first list was successful beyond expectation and really got John going.

In 1977, John decided it was time to leave Chicago and its city ways after rescuing a woman who was being mugged and having his new Chevy Blazer broken into. John and Mary Ann had wanted to move to New Hampshire for some time and the income from OWL LTD allowed this to happen.

The new distance between us (I was going to college in Illinois) was at first painful, but did not provide a real obstacle to our friendship. I made frequent visits to New Hampshire during winter and summer breaks from college. I remember one trip particularly well. I was infected with sports car disease and all I could do was talk about cars - John was rapidly losing patience. Matters came to a head when he went to sleep one night listening to me lecturing to Mary Ann on my new idea for a 1000 cylinder, 1 liter engine, and woke up the next morning to me still talking about it. He did not realize we had only been up for about 30 minutes and assumed that we had been talking about cars all night. Before I could explain, I found myself outside in the snow. This ended my sports car lectures for the rest of the visit.

John gave me a lot of support, both moral and financial, through college. In April, 1980, during my junior year, he took me to London with him on business "to give me a proper education...", much drinking and eating transpired. John really knew how to enjoy London and made many trips there in later years.

On March 12, 1980, John and Mary Ann had a son, Edward Leonid Alexander Barton, and gave me the great honor of being his godfather. As the years went by, I began to realize what a gift this was as John, Edward and I did more together. It was about this time that John discovered his love for creating stained glass art and his natural talent in this field. He planned to slowly reduce his involvement in the numismatic trade and eventually go full time into the stained glass profession. Always trying to share his enthusiasm for art, John created some very striking stained glass panels with the subject matter done in textured glass so his blind client could feel what was there. Some of his last major works were sensuous renditions of women done in such a masterful way that even the most conservative viewer was moved by their beauty. Sadly, the world of stained glass has lost a man who was breathing new life into the art form.

Much of John's new found life and energy, as reflected in his later stained glass works, came from his second wife, Becky Wetherill, whom he married in 1983. John and Becky packed a hell of a lot of living into the time they knew each other, and shared their love and good fortune with all of their friends. Their home was a very welcome place, and they made everyone who visited feel as if they were a special guest. My wife Kim and I moved to Massachusetts in 1985 when I changed jobs, and this allowed us to make frequent weekend trips to New Hampshire to visit John and Becky. Jeremy Barton was born to John and Becky on July 11, 1986. This was a great moment for them, and Jeremy has given Becky some part of John to live with into the future.

Although John and Mary Ann were no longer married, they lived near each other and their son Edward spent time at both their homes. I have fond memories of a camping trip that John, Edward and I went on in the White Mountains two years ago. We were planning to go again after John returned from visiting his sick father in Los Angeles. John had decided that his father should move to New Hampshire so he and Becky could take care of him. This entailed John driving his father's van full of belongings across the country alone. Apparently, John fell asleep while driving through Kansas and lost control of the van. He was killed instantly in the resulting crash.

This is the greatest tragedy that has ever happened in my life - it was like losing a father, older brother, and best friend all at once. John's funeral was a standing room only event and I was brought to tears not only by his death, but also by the emotion freely displayed by so many different people of all walks of life. John Barton gave so much to so many - I hope we all can learn from him.

TWENTY NINE DIFFERENT COINS FROM THESSALY

Thessaly was a vast plain enclosed by mountain barriers and drained by the river Peneios. Legend has it that this plain was once a vast lake. Poseidon, by means of an earthquake, removed the rocks and formed the pass at Tempe, thereby allowing the waters of the river Peneios to flow to the sea. (Herod vii, 129). Hence Poseidon was revered as the creator of the national soil and also as the creator of the celebrated Thessalian horses which grazed in the rich plains.

Games were held in the honour of Poseidon, in which the Thessalian youth exhibited their skill in seizing wild bulls by the horns. This peculiar national religious festival is amply shown on many of the coins.

Larissa was the most important town of Thessaly situated on the right bank of the Peneios. Her earliest coins give us a wide variety of wrestler and bull types. The later issues are of exquisite art using the head of the Nymph Larissa. Through out the series the horse remains as a central part of the coinage.

VERY RARE FIRST ROMAN IMPERIAL AUREUS

Though Augustus had been minting coins for well over nine years at this point, no coins had yet been minted in Rome proper. The mint at Rome was officially closed in 40 BC and did not reopen until 18BC. In a revival of Republican tradition, a collegium of IIIviri monetalis provided the supervisorial role of implementing the monetary policy. Along with this went the obligation of placing their names on the coins they issued; and to some extent the coin types chosen. When Rome was once again to be used as a mint, Turpilianus along with L. Aquillius Florus and M. Durmius made up the first collegium of IIIvir monetalis. It has been postulated from the evidence that Turpilianus was the most senior of the three moneyers with over twenty of the variations out of forty ascribed to him. RIC 278 is the first Aureus produced by the mint at Rome in Imperial times. An important and elusive rarity.
